SEEKING THEMSELVES WORSE OFF 70 days than they were a year ago and fearing food and oil prices, most Filipinos consider themselves "losers," according to a survey conducted this month by a private polling group.

"Difficult times persist for most Filipinos with big majorities considering themselves and the nation as a whole as losers," Pulse Asia Inc., which conducted the survey, said in a statement released yesterday.

Pulse Asia noted that "more Filipinos

By Lela B. Salaverria

BY HIS OWN ACCOUNT, A Court of Appeals justice was offered P10 million to inhibit himself from a case that Manila Electric Co. had filed to stop an attempted takeover by the Government Service Insurance System.

The offer was made in June on July 1 through a Manila law-firm, Justice Jose Sabio Jr. said in a letter dated July 26 to Presiding Justice Conrado Vergara Jr., a copy of which was obtained by the Inquirer yesterday afternoon. (See full text of letter on Page A9.)

In an interview yesterday morning, Sabio said he would hold nothing back in the court's en banc session scheduled today to discuss the issue of the Merito case.

Asked if he had informed Presiding Justice Vergara about any bribery offer made to him in relation to the case, Sabio replied: "Everything, all details, will be discussed. I can just say, no bribe involved. I will, I'll be honest."

Sabio and Justice Mylene D. Manzano-Adad of the appellate court's former 9th Division had presented the issuance of the decision on the Merito petition on July 23.

In that decision, the court voided the order of the Securities and Exchange Commission stopping the buy-out initiated May 27 election of the Merito.

SC: Used cars import ban covers RP; Palace: Only in Subic

By Lela B. Salaverria and Michael L. Ubal

THE SUPREME COURT RULING UPHOLDING Executive Order No. 156, which bans the importation of used cars, applies to Philippine territory outside the former Subic Naval Base, a court official said yesterday.

The ruling says the Subic Bay

Proport Zone is not covered by the order, according to Supreme Court spokesperson Jose Bida Marquet.

Contrary to the statement of Marquet, however, Executive Secretary Roberto Francisco claimed that the ban on the importation of used cars only covered Subic.

Francisco yesterday said EO 156, issued by President Macapagal-Arroyo on Dec. 12, 2002, did not prohibit the entry of second-hand vehicles into Subic Free ports such as the Cagayan Economic Zone (CEZ).

Quoting from the official's 2006 ruling, Marquet said the EO's "provision [on the ban] is declared void insofar as it applies to the Philippine territory outside the presently fenced-in former Subic Naval Base Area and void with respect to its application to the secured fenced-in former Subic Naval Base Area."

Marquet said the Supreme Court decision became final in November 2007, as shown by the entry of judgments in the case.

Sen. Juan Ponce Enriquer said last week that the Supreme Court

BETWEEN PRAYERS AND TEARS, beloved relatives of victims of the MV Princess of the Seas ferry, raised clenched fists and staged more damage suits against ship operator Solpico Lines, 40 days since the tragedy.

Left by morning priest Fr. Robert Reyes, a handful of the victims' relatives went to the Solpico Lines office at North Harbor in Manila at 10 a.m. to say prayers for their beloved—the bodies of most of whom have yet to be recovered.

Flowers placed on the pavement were shaped like a ship to symbolize the ill-fated vessel, while in the center were candles spelling out "GOD" for "humblelight" roses, "or" in peace.

The victims' relatives also carried a banner saying truth, justice and no compromise with Solpico Lines.

She proudly told the crowd during the launching of a squash-enriched "canton" noodle at the Dagupan public market in Ilocos Norte, Manila, that the vegetable noodles were produced through the P10 million she released in March for a project that would provide cheaper but nutritious alternative food to help consumers cope with soaring oil and food prices, as well as reduce hunger in the country.

orable time of my life."

"I love to think (President Macapagal-Arroyo) for all the remarkable experiences," Neri said, as he also noted "there's nothing unusual with my conversations with the President."

Neri also cited his "business-ship" of the Commission on Higher Education, his postings, from his first national celebration of the University of the Philippines and his concluding the presidential task force on education.

Indeed, Neri made his last a participant in the new OFWD headquarters in Diliman, Quezon

Education: the key to fighting poverty

The vision of President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo to deliver the Filipino people out of poverty makes education the linchpin of her administration.

Without wavering from her commitment to put money where her heart is, President Arroyo has allocated an unprecedented increase in the basic education budget from P92 billion in 2001 to a record P149 billion in 2008.

Thanks to PGMA's successful fiscal reforms, education is beginning to get the "shot in the arm" it deserves.

More classrooms, better trained teachers, and quality textbooks at lower cost, as well as higher achievement levels of children.

Expanding Pre-school

Worldwide studies show preschool education as the best foundation to make children and their parents embrace schooling. DepEd is currently expanding its pre-school program to further reduce drop out and increase survival.

Reaching the Unschooled

DepEd has strengthened its alternative learning system to get more out-of-school youth – estimated at 5.6 million – and unschooled adults – approximately at 6 million – to seek basic education, whether formal or non-formal, so that they all get a shot at life's opportunities.

Keeping those in School

The Food-for-School program – the government's massive feeding program – has reduced the elementary school drop out rate. Since 2005, the program has already benefited some 6 million pupils. One sure way to keep children in school is not to let them come to school on empty stomachs.

Improving the Achievement Levels of School Children

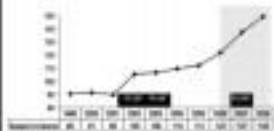

DepEd created a better learning environment by constructing more classrooms – more than 44,000 from 2004 to 2007 from various sources. Funds for construction came from our Adopt-a-School Program partners, foreign donors, DPWH, DTI, and many more. It also hired better-prepared teachers and opened new principal positions to fully carry out school improvement plans.

Textbook procurement likewise improved the textbook to pupil ratio even as the costs of textbooks significantly dropped.

These intervention programs have resulted in a 20% increase in the mean percentage score of Grade 6 pupils in the 2008 National Achievement Test – from 54 in 2006 to 65 in 2008. These encouraging results bring DepEd closer to its target of 75 MPS by 2010.

GI accused of raping Pinay faces court-martial

TOKYO—THE US ARMY IN Japan is seriously considering court-martial proceedings against a serviceman accused of raping a Filipino woman, a military spokesman said on Thursday.

The military has built up a case against Specialist First Lt. Michael S. S., who is employed in a civilian base in the southern Japanese island of Okinawa, the spokesman said.

"In this case, the Army prosecutor has conducted an investigation," the spokesman said. "He has concluded that there is enough evidence that a crime has been committed. He believes so." But he said the final decision will not be made before a commander decides to recommend a court-martial or dismiss the charges in accordance with US military law.

Japanese prosecutors in Tokyo decided not to pursue the case against the serviceman, saying there was insufficient evidence.

But the case has ignited talks in the Philippines, where the police in Manila handle up a case against a local US soldier.

The woman said police in February that she was raped by a soldier.

The Filipino was injured and received medical treatment at a hospital after the alleged incident at an Okinawa base, according to local police. AP

No oil price rollbacks in the offing

By Abigail L. Ho

ALBUQUERQUE—WORLD OIL PRICES have been wobbling in recent days, despite oil firms are not expected to reduce prices at the pump—so how are they going?

According to Edgar Chua, secretary state of Shell Petroleum, although there has been a substantial drop in world oil prices—from the $147 per barrel to an average of $123 to $120 per barrel, the regional benchmark.

Global crude—this has been happening only in the past few days.

"People expect to see this immediately at the pump. If prices continue to soften, there is a low possibility that, fairly soon, we will expect a reflection of that in the market," said Chua.

Energy Secretary Angelo Reyes said that if the downward trend in international oil prices continues in the next few days, consumers should see this reflected at the pump. "In the next two weeks or so,"

Chua said that people should realize that prices have the first in the third week of July were at a very high level.

"If you take the average for July prices, they're about the same level as June," he said.

Shell was one of only two of firms that increased diesel and kerosene prices by P1.30 a liter over the weekend.

Chua said the company's oil price increases prompted it to increase prices over if more of its competitors, including the biggest refiner, Petrophil Corp., held off in taking their prices.

"What they did was part of its marketing strategy and a reaction of market forces working in a deregulated environment," Chua said.

"Those who didn't increase, we don't know why they didn't. It's not our saying that there are no decreases. It's market and competitive forces at work," he said.

"Definitely there will be an impact on us, but there are other gas. If you're going to lose money selling, then maybe you have to pull back a bit," he said.

But he said Shell would not do. "We're not pulling back products from those who want to buy."

Reyes said there were no supply problems in the domestic market.

"Some people have expressed supply concerns, saying it's low pricing. But we don't anticipate any flow we're going to experience in the near future," he said.

Cabral favors more debate on population bill

By Joelito Uy

THE CONTINUING DEBATE ON the controversial reproductive bill now pending in Congress can only be healthy, said Social Welfare Secretary Raposo Cabral as he reiterated her support for the measure.

"I probably should discuss the merits and demerits of the bill. I don't think we should suppress this kind of discussion," said Cabral in a talk with reporters.

Cabral said the Social Welfare Secretary is expressing a point that substantially differs from what is being said in the reproductive health measure's supporters of universal methods of family planning, which remains unpopular with the Church and with President Macapagal-Arroyo.

In her tour of the House, Cabral said that the President's continued support for natural methods of family planning was the one of concerns and jobs. She said that her administration's promotion of natural methods were responsible for curbing the country's population growth.

Cabral yesterday said she believed that Filipino couples would be empowered to make "informed choices" if they were given opportunities to make them.

"It is in favor of the bill because Filipinos have the right to be provided with all the information they need and to be able to decide what method they want to use," she said in a phone interview.

She added that by giving couples more reproductive options, aside from the natural method, would help to stem the country's population growth.

But she reiterated that her position on the bill, which has been repeatedly shelved by the Church, was a personal matter, most shaped by her upbringing, education as a doctor and experience at the social welfare department.

A cardiologist and pharmacologist, Cabral was a professor of medicine and pharmacology at the University of the Philippines.

She served as director of the Philippine Heart Center and chief of cardiology at the Santa Fe Hospital and Medical Center before being appointed social welfare secretary in 2006.

"This has been my mind for a very long time. It just so happened that somebody asked me about it now," Cabral said, while dismissing allegations that she was being pressured to stop supporting the bill by Malacañang.

"I haven't been told in that regard," she said in a one-on-one Cabral interview. The President announced that this is a personal opinion, she said.

She added that the issue was no reason for the government to pressure her to change her mind as the drafting and passage of the bill was a function of the legislature, not the Executive Branch.

Miriam favors condom use, tells Church to get real

By GE C. Cabacungan Jr.

SWS MIRIAM DEFENSOR SANTIAGO, a key administration ally, has come out openly in support of condom use for population control, making common to President Macapagal-Arroyo's controversial stance against artificial birth-control methods.

"I take the position that there is an individual right to use artificial contraception, such as condoms," said Santiago who expressed her support for Social Welfare Secretary Raposo Cabral's stance favoring the reproductive health bill now pending in the House.

Santiago, who calls herself an "uncommitted lay theologian," said the Catholic Church's insistence on artificial contraception was "irrational and archaic."

"The Catholic religion should grow real. Irrationality is not meant only for protection," Santiago said.

Opposition Sen. Raulito Geronzo, who is pushing for a bill making a two-child policy, said the President's position was "political" and that she has attempted to pressure from the Catholic Church and among other activists against population management.

Geronzo claimed that some bishops have confided to him that they were concerned about the country's uncontrolled population growth.

Opposition Sen. Jito Goyanes urged the President to rethink her "one-track mind policy" on natural family planning and not "close her eyes" to the serious population problem.

"It is unable to ignore the natural family planning method as the only safe method because obviously, it is going to bring to various religions and adhere to different beliefs and practices. President Arroyo may be a true believer of the natural method but she has no right imposing it on all Filipinos couples," said Goyanes.

In the House, Rep. Elmer Mendoza yesterday claimed that he has withdrawn his support for the reproductive health bill due to being strongly opposed by the Church.

Mendoza, who is based as a member of the congressional staff, explained that what he actually intended was a bill on the right to information that was consolidated with the population bill, "which I am not supporting."

"Hence, I withdrew co-sponsorship of the consolidated bill," he said in a text message.

Banlaan Bishop Jose Geronzo Jr. said Mendoza had placed his priorities to inform him that the bill was "hanging out" of supporting the measure and that he "would always support the moral of the Church." "I will support from Roman Catholicism and Marist C. Order

Diesel rollback a con job on Filipinos

"WHA! ROLLBACK HAHA! PLSM", "WHA! PLSM, angat na GMA angat!" (Laughs, 7/12/09) The rollback is all for show. These oil companies care the price of gas and diesel is too low. Recently they've been doing this so often so easily. Just as world prices of crude oil hit $100-$110 range, the local oil companies suddenly increased the price of diesel to a whopping P1 a liter. Then quite suddenly, the rolled it down to P1.50 in response to Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's appeal, "don't what" to make it appear oil companies are compassionate? So, now the Filipino people owe them a

'Laudable' story on SMC's project to 'feed' the future

IN JULY 4 1998, THE INQUIRER REPORTED that Sen Miguel Zubo and Rick Sings of Malapang will develop 1 million hectares of land in the Philippines. It also reported that Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo announced signing an order with businessman Eduardo "Tanding" Capangpangan to complete the project. The project was reported as well that certain government agencies would help identify suitable areas and provide technical assistance for the project.

How laudable indeed the project is. And we commend the Inquirer for its deep sense of developmental journalism, such that in the midst of the problems the country is facing today (theater version, dwindling funds for food crops, fuel price surge, and the recent natural disasters), it finds strength to run stories like this. However, I must caution the Inquirer and its partners as they are involved.

Undubbing the project "Feeding our Future," Capangpangan must on us say, "There is no more important issue today than food security. The biggest challenge of the future is to guarantee that people have access to food."

A Sen Miguel executive was also quoted as saying "The priority is to develop rice, corn, sugar, coconut."

And so, the Sen Miguel executive was also quoted in the Inquirer book on saying that he doesn't own much land and grain, so the last part of the long story that "Sen Miguel will ensure most of the problem area owned land...the have food will be our main goal...the will be to develop better technologies..."

Billboard? Don't understand! All divisions made in the Philippines, except? This will be "feed the future?" —LEILA LEEFER, leila@rediffmail.com

AS SHINY AS THE MANY chalets and villas and mansions on the edges of the Manila Bay in Cavite, the thought of what lies ahead for them when the government pushes a road modernization project that will lead to an anticipated logistical hub at Manila-Singapore Point.

"We were just told by Mayor [Roldo Benito] to be prepared," Antonio Benito, president of the Barangay Hapagang ng General Road Inc. (BHRG), said. "It is a hard thing to say. We might have to start moving out of our homes."

The proposed road project will connect the Manila-Corona Road to Manila-Singapore Point. The project is a 10-km road project in Cavite, under the R-1 Expressway Extension Project of the Philippine Department of Transportation (DOTr).

Survey: Most Filipinos see selves as losers

now see themselves as losers than in March 2008. The percentage of losers increased from 39 percent from the last survey to 73 percent in the latest survey.

The polling group said there were more losers in nearly all geographic areas and socioeconomic classes this month than three months ago.

Covering 3,000 respondents aged 18 years and older, the survey was conducted from July 1 to 14 using face-to-face interviews. It had a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

The survey asked respondents to complete the following statement: "Compared to the past 12 months, can you say that your way of life now is...?" and "Compared to the past 12 months, can you say that the way of life of most Filipinos now is..." and were asked to choose between the responses, "better now," "same as then" and "worse now."

Those who answered "better now" were referred to as "winners" while those who answered "worse now" were referred to as "losers."

Those in every age bracket (175 percent) believe they are "losers" before the survey.

More than half in every age (84 percent) believe that other Filipinos in general would agree with them off to day than last year.

Economy worsened

The gloomy sentiment of the survey is due to the fact that nearly half in 18 regions (38 percent) believe that the economy has worsened between 2008 and 2009, despite the 6.5 percent growth by the Asian Development Bank.

The belief that the economy has worsened is held by 40 percent of respondents in all regions, according to Pulse Asia.

Pulse Asia earlier reported results from the same survey that showed that nearly every 30 adult Filipinos (13 percent) believed that President Macapagal-Arroyo's past term of the Asian Development Bank was terrible. The results also showed that nearly half of Filipinos (50 percent) disapproved her 48 percent disapproval of her performance.

The survey also found that about two in every three (66 percent) expected themselves to be worse off over the next year. An even higher percentage (79 percent) expected pessimism about the national quality of life over the next year.

More pessimistic pessimists

Pulse Asia noted that the gloomy state of pessimism was "more pronounced" as their gloomy outlook on both expected personal and national quality of life was increased by 27 percentage points.

Belief that quality of life, both on the personal and national level, has worsened over the past year was reported by majority across all geographic areas and socioeconomic groups.

On the personal quality of life, 64 percent to 90 percent in Metro Manila, 63 percent in the Visayas, 72 percent in Luzon, 69 percent in Mindanao, and 58 percent in Metro Manila said it was "worse now" than a year ago. Seventy-eight percent in Metro Manila, 64 percent in the Visayas, 72 percent in Luzon, 69 percent in Mindanao, and 58 percent in Metro Manila said it was "worse now" than a year ago. Seventy-eight percent in Metro Manila, 64 percent in the Visayas, 72 percent in Luzon, 69 percent in Mindanao, and 58 percent in Metro Manila said it was "worse now" than a year ago.

Only 7 percent nationwide said they perceived quality of life improved over the past year, while 17 percent said it did not change.

While, again in the case of the nation, 74 percent in Metro Manila, 51 percent in the

Stocks buoyed by banks, oil and strong dollar

WASHINGTON—GLOBAL STOCKS rose on Thursday as investors weighed that the worst news from U.S. banks might be over and could hearten a strengthening dollar and falling oil prices.

Regional stock markets in Europe, the U.S. and Asia were mixed. Thursday's S&P 500 closed at 1,352.18, up 1.57 points from the previous day's close.

Investors following global equities saw top global stock index MSCI World Index, which averaged a 0.5% gain, rise 0.5% to 5,544.18, following the U.S. market's lead.

to put a few more than 100,000 on the line in a year and a half.

"The reason prices are not going up is that there are reports that the economy is not as robust as we thought," said Robert Shiller, a risk management vice president at Citigroup.

The weakening oil price has been helped by the dollar, which was steady near Thursday's one-month high of about $78.20, and an unexpected rise in U.S. consumer confidence offsetting a weaker than hoped fall in Japanese industrial output.

The U.S. dollar index, which measures the dollar's price against a basket of 10 currencies, climbed up to 73.360, reaching its highest level in about a month.

The U.S. economy could avoid a second recession, analysts say, as the U.S. dollar's strength and the U.S. market's recovery are seen as a boost.

Investors will closely watch the U.S. nonfarm payroll report due later in the day to help narrow forecasts for key U.S. jobs numbers due on Friday.

"The market has been driven by the U.S. economy," said Robert Shiller, a risk management vice president at Citigroup.

What Makes Mr. Rockefeller the Ultimate Oyster Place.

Mr. Rockefeller is a casual dining restaurant specializing in fresh oysters from Manila City. Its name came from the popular hotel oyster dish called "Oyster Rockefeller". This dish was created in the 1880s by a French Chef in New Orleans. It got its name from the chef who created this specialty and commented that the oysters were "as rich as Rockefeller", referring to the richest man in the United States of America at that time.

The original recipe in New Orleans was made out of 18 ingredients and Mr. Rockefeller remains faithful to the classic taste by following the same procedures and ingredients.

Mr. Rockefeller's food and service makes dining a truly world-class experience. The restaurant's menu includes steaks, ribs, and good oysters.

Highly recommended are the US Prime Rib-eye and Shrimp Rockefeller. Also don't miss the seafood with these special sauce. Craving for seafood? Try the Hawaiian Shrimp and Alaskan Sole Fillet with Lemon Pepper Sauce and Braised Coated Garlic Noodles. Of course, your dining experience with Mr. Rockefeller will not be complete without trying any one of their oyster varieties. You can choose to have it plain, fresh, grilled or topped with sauce.

Like its fresh oysters, oyster steaks, and ribs, Mr. Rockefeller only chooses ingredients of the highest quality. That's why the restaurant sought a partnership with Unilever Food Solutions - makers of Knorr, Lady's Choice, Best Foods, Carr's TFCs and Lipton. Unilever Food Solutions makes this partnership official by making sure that the restaurant gets efficient customer service and products that are always available for their needs.

Sugar high in Negros

I THOUGHT THE FIRST TIME I LEFT CUBA about not eating sugar with my coffee. I was at the hotel and refusing to use the phony imported product served in bud jars. I was told to be patient, but that the first day I had a sugar high from the same product and had several hours of sleep.

People in Montreal with diabetes and in Miami the first thing I would think of eating. I had it on my first day at lunch with Mrs. M. at her restaurant (two-grams) (about 900-1,000 grams) but the first time I had it was the traditional kind of macaroni-and-cheese in pasta.

I had what a considered a new rule, also used there with different brands of macaroni and one you could make as an of an almost new.

But I remembered one thing that said as I went to get some in that restaurant (about 900-1,000 grams) like I was in an ordinary looking that someone like me to be in there from that time.

Very different from what I've tried, the Italian pasta has two thin craters that pull up the macaroni filling doesn't stay within the craters but looks out.

Hagg's Homemade Products (50 San Sebastian Street) has the many items produced by the company but also sells products from other suppliers (vegetables and fruits).

On the day of my visit, Hagg had an issue just standard macaroni, but also macaroni. Nothing better than those those whole wheat still seems and it told me that eating those pasta filling is the best way to take them. Hagg also makes excellent banana nut, banana nutty with nuts of various kinds and has "Desserts made of various" (pasta) with a pill not filling of course to chocolate.

Old 'pasta'

In San Jose City a visit to 100 Blvd. Street is a must. It's one of the oldest

Wheat grass. . .

Wheat. No disease will thrive on an alkaline soil. What makes a body alkaline or acidic depends on one's diet. A diet rich in animal protein, fat, preservatives, artificial sweeteners, causes the body to be acidic. A diet rich in grains, unpolished grains, vegetables and fruit makes it alkaline.

"Second, an ounce of fruit when given just is equivalent to a kilo of eggs in a digestive system. When given in a long fruit, more is a sugar-saturated and highly-saturated, it is rich in energy and a good source of vitamins and minerals, more than most of the vegetables we eat."

Remember that more interesting is cooked, fruit, if not all the time, it is not best. Phosphorus is like no sugar, it is the same as a sugar-saturated agent, but perfect, so in moderation, many kinds of sugar-saturated agents are good.

"Third, and, 'Sweet' does not mean enough to give whole grains a try."

So, try it now! Call Christopher at 857-048794 or 857-048793.

Survey finds

Recent results say low sugar consumption, for as much as to what it contains, the carbohydrates are not as bad.

I have two extremely young children and this week, most of them for you are getting.

A perfect example of a perfect appetite is that I am there. My first sugar-saturated Indian (about 100-150 grams) and 400-500 grams of it is served with apple-cherry, nuts, two more (the same) and a goodly amount from the apple-cherry that would make the most of them.

Well, I don't really know. I've never been to a doctor's office.

And you think you're a doctor?

I've never been to a doctor's office.

I'm not a doctor, but I can tell you that you're not a doctor either.
